Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The house faces east from a hillside site overlooking Old Town Road. A brick foundation/cellar accommodates the uneven site. The house itself is one and a half story, framed and weatherboarded with a shingled gable roof. It has a five-bay facade with a central doorway that implies a central-passage plan. However, this correspondence between fenestration and plan was not always so predictable in the 1935-40 era, when this house was probably built. The upper story is illuminated by three gabled dormers on the east side and one monitor dormer on the west. The rear one-story shed is probably original to the house. The south side of the house is sheltered by a one-story screened-in porch. On the north side, there is an added one-story two-bay wing.
